

Dear Everyone,

Meanwhile, the hunt for Dr Livingstone continues

Dates at last! We are now officially heading for Argentina on the 24th of November. Specifically we are aiming for the city of Cordoba, which is the second city in Argentina (Birmingham with a slightly different accent....) On arrival the initial plans are to meet some people, learn some (more) Spanish, find a place to live, a church to go to, and generally become acclimatised to summer in Argentina, which will be fairly hot by all accounts by then. We are pleased to have a fixed date now, as this will give us a cut-off point, after which we cannot plan things for here in the UK. On the other side, it means we're going to need to organise ourselves for that deadline.

Practical things still to do include; property to be finished and let out, ridding ourselves of cars, sorting our possessions into store / take / lose, the final three speaking engagements, and seeing friends and family. Our main concern is that we will keep an overall perspective on what is important and don't allow ourselves to become lost among the details.

At present we are unsure of what our postal address may be, but email addresses will still work, and we will update you on other details as they become available.
