

Dear Everyone,

Greetings from Spring in Córdoba. We hope you are well. It's a bank holiday today so naturally it has rained all day.. Murphy's law goes global.

We're all doing fine, Joni will be a month old in a few days time, which is slightly odd to think that he was only due around now. He is growing fast, and learning new things every day; so are we! He now has his Argentinian ID document (right), and we're about to embark on the paperwork for the British side of things. The photo on the left was taken at his presentation ceremony which took place at church last week.

Work... we are busily changing and feeding; and changing and feeding; and sometimes feeding and changing, which seems to take up most of the day. Hazel is trying to catch up with some reading and research, and to incorporate some other outside activities as time and energy levels allow. We have been out to the childrens' home, and hoping to go again this week, and I even managed to take Joni with me on the bike the other day. Luckily this is a culture where in many situations it is fine to bring baby along too.

Martin is enjoying work in the prison, hobnobbing with the famous if not the rich. He is honoured to have been twice mistaken for a prisoner... must be the hair. Tomorrow he is starting to study the gospel of Mark with the music group and some hangers on. On Saturdays he is involved in one to one visiting, and is looking to develop that on an "organic" basis. Martin's language continues to improve, and still needs prayer to be able to communicate on a deeper level with the guys.

Other stuff of life. We now have a car, (photo below) as of this weekend, which hopefully should make trips out to the province easier, where public transport is less comprehensive than in the city. In the medium term we are looking for wisdom and guidance as we are considering the possibilities of moving to the province when the contract runs out on this house (April 2008). This would enable more ministry opportunities for Hazel, but would potentially involve some lengthy commuting for Martin. We are also hoping to come back to the UK on home-leave next year, so again looking for wisdom as we put dates etc together once we have Joni's paperwork completed and passports through.

Updates and information can be found on our blog at www.frostmartinhazel.org And our continued thanks for all your support in standing with us.

Love From
